

Diving into the Wreck

By Adrienne Rich

5 First having read the book of myths, and loaded the camera,
and checked the edge of the knife-blade, I put on the body-armor of black rubber the absurd flippers
the grave and awkward mask.
I am having to do this 10 not like Cousteau with his assiduous team
aboard the sun-flooded schooner but here alone.

15 There is a ladder.
The ladder is always there hanging innocently
close to the side of the schooner.
We know what it is for,
20 we who have used it.
Otherwise
it is a piece of maritime floss some sundry equipment.

25 I go down.
Rung after rung and still the oxygen immerses me
the blue light
the clear atoms
30 of our human air.
I go down.
My flippers cripple me,
I crawl like an insect down the ladder and there is no one 35 to tell me when the ocean will begin.

40 First the air is blue and then it is bluer and then green and then black I am blacking out and yet my mask is powerful it pumps my blood with power the sea is another story the sea is not a question of power 45 I have to learn alone to turn my body without force in the deep element.

5 And now: it is easy to forget what I came for among so many who have always lived here
swaying their crenellated fans between the reefs 10 and besides
you breathe differently down here.

I came to explore the wreck.
The words are purposes.
15 The words are maps.
I came to see the damage that was done and the treasures that prevail.
I stroke the beam of my lamp slowly along the flank 20 of something more permanent than fish or weed

the thing I came for:
the wreck and not the story of the wreck 25 the thing itself and not the myth the drowned face always staring toward the sun
the evidence of damage
worn by salt and away into this threadbare beauty 30 the ribs of the disaster curving their assertion among the tentative haunters.

This is the place.
35 And I am here, the mermaid whose dark hair streams black, the merman in his armored body.
We circle silently
about the wreck
we dive into the hold.
40 I am she: I am he whose drowned face sleeps with open eyes whose breasts still bear the stress whose silver, copper, vermeil cargo lies 45 obscurely inside barrels half-wedged and left to rot we are the half-destroyed instruments that once held to a course the water-eaten log

the fouled compass

We are, I am, you are
by cowardice or courage 5 the one who find our way back to this scene
carrying a knife, a camera a book of myths
in which 10 our names do not appear.
