The Munich Security Conference (MSC)

The Munich Security Conference is the world's leading independent forum for debating international security policy. In addition to its annual flagship conference, the MSC regularly convenes high-profile events around the world. The MSC publishes the annual Munich Security Report and other formats on specific security issues.

The Mercator Institute for China Studies (MERICS)

Since its foundation in 2013, MERICS has established itself as the leading European think tank on China. MERICS publications often drive China policy debates in Europe and beyond and are frequently quoted in international media. MERICS experts are regularly consulted for their independent expertise by senior public and private sector decision-makers from across Europe. Having its main premises in Berlin, MERICS also entertains an office in Brussels and has staff based in different European capitals.

The Aspen Strategy Group (ASG)

The Aspen Strategy Group's mission is to provide a bipartisan forum to explore the preeminent foreign policy challenges the United States faces. Its cross-disciplinary and high-level examination of policy strategies for addressing preeminent and emerging topics makes it crucially relevant to the American and global policy communities.

The Distinguished Reflection Group on Transatlantic China Policy

The Distinguished Reflection Group on Transatlantic China Policy was convened by the Munich Security Conference, the Mercator Institute for China Studies, and the Aspen Strategy Group. Chaired by Ambassador Wolfgang Ischinger and Professor Joseph S. Nye, Jr., it brought together 19 leading experts on China and transatlantic relations from both sides of the Atlantic. Throughout the first half of 2021, members worked in sub-groups on seven individual issue areas as well as in plenary formats and engaged in outreach to transatlantic decision-makers. The concluding report represents an effort at capturing the prevailing opinion among members.
